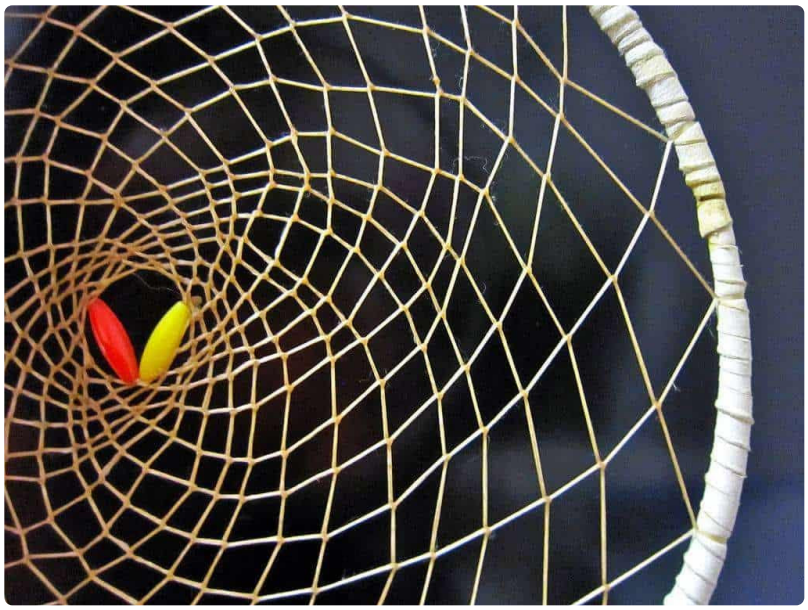
The dreamcatcher might be the most recognizable piece of Native American culture next to the totem pole or feathered headdress.



From earrings to home décor, you can get a plastic, mass-produced dream catcher on the Internet in 10 minutes… but that's boring.

A dream catcher you made yourself is different.

Traditionally, we meld our own style into our dream catchers, with unique beads, feathers, gems, and netting patterns.

And soon you will be able to build your own, too!

A dream catcher is an awesome keepsake, an excellent gift, and a deeply symbolic piece of culture to have in your home.

Learn to make your own.

With your support, we can create more tutorials so you and your loved ones can create even more amazing things.

Please consider making a donation so we can strengthen the voice of Native American culture from coast to coast and bring its traditions, culture, music, art, and dance to even more people.

Even in today's climate, we're not slowing down! We're producing virtual events, articles and media to get the word out, and we invite you and your loved ones to take part in our sacred traditions.
